

The FCC should leave the regulations as they are, there is no meaningful reason to change them except as political payback. The media is becoming too "owner-centric" and losing its independence due to the corporately-directed newsgathering and reporting that is going on.

Leave it alone, and spend time and money on useful things, not rewarding huge companies that made huge campaign contributions.